EXPLORING THE UNEXPLORED: HOMOEOPATHIC REMEDIES FROM THE FUNGI KINGDOM

Dr. Swati Solanki

(M.D.Hom)

Assi. Prof, Dept of Practice of Medicine

Have you come across the dreaded black mould in a bathroom or fridge? Have you seen Penicillium growing on stale bread? Have you thought how the bread, beer, wine and cheese are made? Yes, the answer is Moulds, Fungi or Yeast.

Fungi are group of organisms that belong to kingdom fungi. It has more than 100,000 species including mushrooms and bread moulds, as well as the lichens. There are 3 types of fungi 1) Mushrooms 2) Molds 3) Yeasts. They are heterotrophs and require complex organic chemicals in order to grow and therefore grow on dead organic matter. It also means they obtain their nutrients by decomposing organic matter or forming symbiotic relationships with other organisms.

Parasitic fungi grow on living tissues. Autotrophs can grow using simple, inorganic chemicals. Phototrophs use and require light as a source of energy and chemotrophs require a supply of chemical energy, but can grow in the dark. Humans and many microbes are heterotrophs and chemotrophs whilst plants are autotrophs and phototrophs. All fungi are eukaryotic. Fungi are probably the most familiar of microbes encountered by non-microbiologists.

Fungi are a very large group of thallophytes without Chlorophyll. They reproduce by means of spores. They may occur in soil, water or on other living organisms etc. There are harmful and useful fungi some like mushroom are edible. Fungi are widely used in certain industries; antibiotic penicillin is produced from the fungus penicillium

There are more than 80 different remedies in homeopathy which belong to Fungi family in homeopathy.

Some of the remedies which belongs to fungi in homeopathy:
